

New Etiquette Guide For the Motorists

ALWAYS assist your lady passengers to their seats before taking your own. When alighting suddenly at a stone wall or fence, however, the question of precedence is not considered.

When a tire is punctured beyond repair it is considered the correct thing on the part of a host to be explicit as to the number of miles the party must walk to reach home.

If anything disagreeable happens lay it to the chauffeur. If he is a bigger man than you it is permissible to do this behind his back.

After you have run down a pedestrian be sure and "honk-honk" very vigorously, especially if you have previously given no warning signal. This little act of attention may be soothing to the last moments of the unfortunate.

If a horse shows signs of fright put on all possible power and go by him at full speed. In this way he will get rid of his fear—and possibly of his driver—more quickly.

If a village constable stands in the road, watch in hand, head your machine at the watch. A correct aim destroys evidence.

No matter how well you can run your car, always keep a chauffeur in your pay. Courtrooms and country jails are stuffy places.

If ladies are present when you get on your back under the machine to fix that "little trouble" it is the custom to gag yourself with cotton waste.

If you have been persuaded to purchase a copy of "Rules of the Road" throw it away. There are no rules for motorists.—New York Press.

His Decision.

The following anecdote is told of a professor in a western university:

One day while walking with a friend in San Francisco the professor and his companion became involved in an argument as to which was the handsomer man of the two. Not being able to arrive at a settlement of the question, they agreed, in a spirit of fun, to leave it to the decision of a Chinaman who was seen approaching them. The matter being laid before him, the oriental then considered long and carefully; then he announced in a tone of finality, "Both are worse."—Harper's Weekly.

An Honest Man.

Hiram Stroode for the seventh time was about to fail. He called in an expert accountant to disentangle his books. The accountant after two days' work announced to Hiram that he would be able to pay his creditors 4 cents on the dollar. At this news the old man looked vexed.

"Heretofore," he said, frowning, "I have always paid 10 cents on the dollar."

A virtuous and benevolent expression spread over his face.

"And I will do so now," he resumed. "I will make up the difference out of my own pocket."

Raising Turkeys.

The breed of turkeys raised does not make so much difference as the breed of chickens. Any kind of turkey will bring the market price if it is plump and fat, although the Bronze seems to be the best all around breed, and the blooded stock will fatten more quickly and at less expense than the common run of fowls.

A Choice.

"What is it this morning?" asked the new waitress. "Ham and eggs, isn't it?"

"No," replied Mrs. Starvem, "not exactly, and I want you to note this well. You must be careful to say to each boarder, 'Ham or eggs?'—Catholic Standard and Times.
